ONEOHTRIX POINT NEVER
THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 12 2013 | 8PM
Oneohtrix Point Never—aka Daniel Lopatin—is a Brooklyn-based composer who creates electronic music that is often described as “cinematic” and “orchestral.” While broad in range, Lopatin does not ignore the small stuff; his sound engineering crafts and controls every detail and effect. Pulling from a wide range of influences—synth sounds, television commercials, classical minimalism, and high-end audio production—Lopatin condenses the disparate sounds to form music that slopes forward with self-contained narratives. Oneohtrix Point Never performs new music with visuals from his upcoming album.

Oneohtrix Point Never (OPN) is Daniel Lopatin, a Boston-bred, Brooklyn-based artist whose celebrated emergence has opened the general public’s ears to daring combinations of electronic sound in ways unheard of in recent cultural memory. His 2010 album, Returnal, was made using vintage synthesizers to create widescreen ambient landscapes, while his latest album, Replica, manipulate samples from 1980s TV commercials to construct evocative tracks of unexpected emotional depth.

Praised by critics around the world, audiences over the past several years have gravitated to OPN’s profound arrangements, which touch upon both mainstream and discarded electronic music histories; merging the structural freedom of noise with the abstract emotionality of work considered by many to be “background music.” In addition to his work as OPN, Lopatin is known for his production and arrangement work, having collaborated with Antony Hegarty, Doug Aitken, Fennesz, Tim Hecker, and Hans-Peter Lindstrøm, among others.
